Fish tanks at Main Library to be removed

The large set of fish tanks in the Main Library, next to the children's area, will be removed soon, due to failing systems.

The tanks, which are about 15 years old, are in need of costly repairs to continue operating, and so the tanks will be removed on Oct. 8 and 9. Reef Encounters will remove and relocate the fish, and disassemble and recycle the tanks and cabinetry.

The tropical fish tank in the children's area will remain.

Overheard at BPL...

A young boy was looking for books about brains in the children's library, and after looking through the available books, he asked his mom, "Are there any funny ones?"

Burial rites: a novel
by Hannah Kent

"In her impressive debut, Hannah Kent strips all the sensationalism from a tragic murder case in order to reveal the human heartbreak beneath. Based on a true event, Kent's fictionalized account is almost elegiac in its respectful treatment of the incident itself, as well as the principal players involved.

Somber and atmospheric, the hardships of farm life in 19th century Iceland are evocatively rendered in shades of sea, snow, and mist grey, to match the sad inner world of the main protagonist. I challenge anyone to read the finale and remain unmoved."
